NASSAU COUNTY D.A. DILLON & CATHOLIC LEAGUE: MAKE ABORTIONISTS REPORT ABUSE

Nassau County District Attorney Denis Dillon is proposing County legislation that would require all professionals and volunteers who work with young people—including abortion providers—to report suspicions of abuse of minors to law enforcement authorities.

Dillon's proposal, Bill No. 2002—introduced by the Legislature's minority leader, Republican Peter Schmitt—is an effort to expand a law passed by the County several months ago that focused exclusively on requiring clergy to report suspicions of abuse of minors. "The experience of our office or just a glance at recent headlines," Dillon explained, "confirms that such abuse occurs among virtually all groups that work with young people: teachers and other school personnel, sports coaches, scout leaders, school bus drivers, camp counselors, even police officers."

Moreover, Dillon noted the study by Life Dynamics, Inc., which found that among girls 15 and under who became pregnant, between 60 and 80 percent are impregnated by adult males—and, according to the same study, in 90 percent of these cases abortion providers fail to report this crime of statutory rape. This, Dillon said, provides just one glaring example of a professional group that should be required to report suspicions of abuse. And, since current New York State law requires such reporting only when a minor is abused by a family member, Dillon is urging Nassau County to require not only clergy but all professionals and volunteers who have regular contact with young people to report any suspicions of abuse committed by any adult.

Predictably, abortion supporters in the County Legislature and the media have responded by attacking Dillon and targeting his Catholic faith. Catholic League President Bill Donohue condemned this "Catholic-baiting," and, in a letter to every member of the Nassau County Legislature, called for passage of Dillon's bill. If the Nassau law "is not made inclusive to cover counselors, social workers, abortion providers, et al.," Donohue wrote, then it will "demonstrate the selective interest that lawmakers have in protecting minors from adult predators."

They are particularly selective in excluding abortion providers from such requirements. Donohue pointed out that last spring, when the New York State Senate was considering a similar bill, it was successfully blocked by the New York Civil Liberties Union and Family Planning Advocates, who did not want to require abortionists to report incidents of statutory rape.

To assure that this does not happen in Nassau County, DA Denis Dillon needs your support, in the form of letters and phone calls to your County Legislator, urging him or her to support this legislation. Write to your legislator at Nassau County Legislature, 1 West Street, Mineola, NY 11501. To find out the name or direct phone number of your County Legislator, call Rick Hinshaw at DA Dillon's office: (516) 571-2994.

FEDERAL LEGISLATION

After recent years of setbacks, the pro-life forces have emerged as a solid and healthy political force that is coming to the rescue of the innocent unborn, the mentally and physically handicapped and the elderly infirm. This was demonstrated by the mid-term election results which saw:

1. The control of the U.S. Senate passing from the hands of pro-abortion Senator Tom Daschle, (D-SD) to pro-life Senator Trent Lott, (R-Miss).
2. Pro-life Republicans now claim 51 Senate seats.
3. Vital Senate Committees will be chaired by Republicans most of who are pro-life.
4. Of the 52 new members in the House of Representatives 34 are solidly pro-life.
5. Of the 7 new women in Congress 5 are pro-life and the percentage of pro-life women in Congress has jumped 71%.

It would be well to heed the words of President George W. Bush who has admonished pro-lifers "not to boast or gloat over the pro-life victories."

The work to regain the protection of the innocent unborn life from the various forms of abortion is ahead of us. Senator Majority leader Trent Lott has indicated that he will bring up the ban on Partial Birth abortions early in the 108th Congress. The House has passed the ban on Partial Birth Abortions at least 3 times by a substantial majority of votes. Continue with your prayers and keep informed.

MARCH FOR LIFE—JANUARY 22, 2003—(see Page 1.). All persons attending the March For Life are urged to stop at the office of his or her Senator and House Member for a visit or at very least to leave a pro-life message. Persons unable to travel to Washington are urged to contact this new Congress with a pro-life message.

Sample message:

You are urged to make pro-life legislation a priority in this session. Passage of the bill to ban Partial Birth Abortion and other pro-life legislation are critical to a true respect for human life in our country. Please reply. Thank you.

NEW YORK STATE LEGISLATION

The 2003-2004 N.Y. State Legislative Session is scheduled to begin on 1/8/03, the day Governor George Pataki will give his State of the State Address. Since it is a new session all bills that are reintroduced will be assigned new bill numbers.

Unfortunately, as has been true in our state for 30 years, no bill restricting abortion was passed in the 2001-2002 Legislative session. Until recent sessions the Senate could be depended on to support pro-life bills and oppose anti-life bills. This is no longer true. Please contact Senator Joseph L. Bruno, Senate Majority Leader and your State Senator.

Sample Message:

Dear Senator Bruno:

Because you are State Majority Leader I feel that is important to express my deep concern about the stranglehold pro-abortion groups have over the legislative agenda in New York State. In the 2001-2002 Session any bill which would regulate or restrict abortion died in committee. Numerous polls indicate that over 70% of voters favor women's right to know and parental notification and/or consent legislation. Had these bills been publicly debated in the Senate they would have passed. It is not surprising that these bills died in committee in the Assembly, but it surprises me that Senate committees took no action. I also wonder why you and some of the other Senators kept "compromising" until the version of the Women's Health and Wellness bill that passed was almost identical to that favored by NARAL and the Assembly leadership.

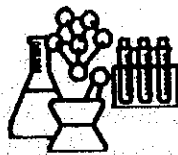

For many years those of us who believe in the sanctity of human life were convinced that you also wanted to protect our young teenagers, our women and our families from those abortion providers who put thirst for profits ahead of the life and health of others. You did not do this in the 2001-2002 Session. During the 2003-2004 Session do you intend to resist pressure from NARAL and represent the majority of your constituents. Please reply. Thank you.

Address: New York State Senate, Albany, N.Y. 12247

HEALTH & SCIENCE REPORT

BABI

Have you ever heard of BABI? Well, it sounds like baby, so it must be acceptable, right? BABI stands for blastomere analysis before implantation. Does this give you a better idea of what it is? It is the next step in genetic engineering.

BABI is fully discussed in the Fall 2002 Michael Fund Newsletter from which the following is excerpted: The blastomere is the structure of cells resulting from the very earliest division of a fertilized egg or zygote... (BABI is) the latest and most lethal prenatal diagnosis... As with other forms of non-therapeutic first and second trimester prenatal diagnosis, the objective of BABI is to insure that offspring with genetic defects are killed before birth. However, BABI avoids the 'fuss and muss' of late term eugenic abortion by accomplishing the killing of offspring at the earliest stages of human development outside the mother's womb in the spic and span hell of the artificial reproductive technology (ART) laboratory." Eugenicists have long awaited the advancements in technology that would make the detection of defects at such an early stage of development a possibility. This process is used in connection with in vitro fertilization.

... While it is possible to lavage the uterus to obtain human embryos from the female reproductive tract following normal coitus and fertilization, the preferred method of initiating the BABI process is to use in vitro fertilization (IVF). Following artificially induced super-ovulation of the woman, mature eggs are collected and fertilized in test tubes in order to produce multiple human embryos.

As a rule, BABI specialists will create a minimum of ten human embryos in order to be assured of getting one 'take home baby'. In the IVF laboratory, the 23 chromosomes of the father's (or donor's) sperm are combined with the mother's (or donor's) egg to produce a single-cell zygote containing 46 chromosomes—the marker for the human species. This process is repeated to produce the desired number of tiny human beings, somewhere between 10-12 per IVF cycle. Each of these individual human zygotes immediately begins to divide—first into two cells, then three, then four, then eight.

At the 8-cell stage, the IVF/BABI technician uses a micro-needle to remove a single cell from each of the human embryos for analysis. This procedure delays cell division for a few hours. Then, unless the embryo has been damaged, normal development continues... Once the cells from each human embryo have been analyzed, the affected embryos (or in case of an X-related disorder, all male embryos) are destroyed. The remaining embryos are then graded for implantation potential and the endometrium of the mother's womb hormonally prepared for implantation. One to three of the selected embryos are then transferred from the test tube to the womb on day 4 or 5.

At this point in the BABI process, the parents are given various "options" as to the fate of their remaining offspring. The tiny embryos can be stored cryogenically for possible future transplantation, they can be donated for scientific "research" or they can be killed outright... BABI can currently test for more than 400 conditions, including single gene disorders and chromosomal abnormalities (aneuploidy and translocations) including Down syndrome, Turner syndrome and Fragile X; Tay-Sachs, hemoglobin disorders including Sickle Cell and Thalassemia anemias; Duchenne muscular dystrophy; Lesch-Nyhan disease; Huntington's disease and cystic fibrosis. Proponents of BABI have argued that over 200 disorders can be 'prevented' by gender selection alone.

Also, since only 35% of all birth defects are inherited, and since BABI does not test for all chromosomal disorders, the procedure cannot automatically guarantee parents a "perfect" child. That is why the American Society for Reproductive Medicine and the Society for Assisted Reproductive Technology recommend that all BABI patients undergo a non-invasive form of prenatal diagnosis during the first trimester—usually a combination of ultrasound and alpha fetal protein testing—to see if the transferred embryo or embryos are still "normal". If the test indicates a possible "problem", chorion villi sampling or amniocentesis is offered during the second trimester along with the usual "pregnancy termination" of any "defectives". In the unlikely event that two or more children have weathered the IVF storm, the mother, particularly if she is an older woman, is also given the option of "pregnancy reduction", that is, the killing off of all but one child. A large dose of potassium chloride is injected into the heart of babies marked for death and the dead bodies are later removed piecemeal.

There are currently 40 BABI testing centers in the world in 17 different countries... In the United States and abroad, the IVF/BABI industry is driven by corporate greed and inspired by the eugenic mentality. It is big business... IVF labs also earn money from the sale of human embryos, including BABI-produced embryos that have been either abandoned or "donated" to science by clients. Drug companies pay well for human embryos that can be used to develop more efficient abortifacient drugs or to test various medications or environmental chemicals on the young human embryo... the U.S. Public Health Service's "Healthy People 2000" program identifies BABI as a form of "family planning" since it permits "genetically disadvantaged people" to have children free of serious birth defects without the "family nightmare" of late abortion...

In the words of Dr. Robert G. Edwards, considered the father of IVF, "BABI is not abortion. It is the pre-clinical abortion of blighted ova." Edwards is not shy about pointing out certain societal advantages from BABI. He openly professes that BABI eliminates the need for both the treatment and care of handicapped children and adults. Susan Heyner of the Albert Einstein Medical Center writes, "The motivation for many reproductive biologists to study early developmental processes is the specter of overpopulation." Normal human beings are too prolific. They simply have too many children. Reproductive biologists have come to the rescue by developing new birth control techniques.

However, on the flip side of the population equation are infertile couples. It is ironic that infertility in women is often linked to the use of birth control methods advanced by the reproductive biologists. Once again biotechnology comes to the rescue with... artificial insemination, IVF, prenatal diagnosis and BABI. The goal: to help people to achieve a minimum, but to avoid a maximum of births.

May God forgive us!

JANUARY 2003 PRO-LIFE CALENDAR OF EVENTS

ONE HOUR ON A SATURDAY MORNING....A LIFE NEWS reader reports: Having recently decided to spend an hour each month at one of the below listed sites, I was immediately taken by the dedication of those who attend weekly, often for several hours. Then, last week, I witnessed a "save" as a car entering the abortion facility slowed down and the couple spoke to our volunteers. Soon the rain began but our people continued. After 40 minutes the couple, waving to all, drove off to the Life Center for further help. What an awesome feeling to have been a small part of this. As this scene unfolded all I did was pray silently and hold my sign. For many years I have been reading pro-life material yet I freeze after verbalizing two sentences. I remain "the great sign holder". Still, the pro-life effort needs sign holders. During these cold months, please consider one hour to back up these steadfast 'regulars'. Get started by calling any contact person below to offer help.

Prayer vigil schedules at Long Island abortion provider/referral sites are listed below. Please offer your presence and your prayers at one of the listed sites as often as possible. IMPORTANT: Peaceful assembly on public property near abortion site is a lawful First Amendment privilege. Please call the prayer vigil contact person at the phone numbers listed below before going to a site near you, and never remain at a site alone.

Question: What Pro-Life Groups are affiliated with Specific Denominations?

Answer: A pro-life activist who belongs to a pro-abortion (or indifferent) church or congregation is a lonely person indeed. In order to be the most effective "light in the darkness" he can be, he must draw strength from other pro-lifers who share his faith. A number of pro-life groups that have resources tailored to the needs of individual denominations are always willing to share advice and materials that help pro-life activists in their work.
