More Than 8,000 Babies Lost to Abortion on Long Island in 2008

Reported by the NY State Department of Health Source: www.health.state.ny.us/nysdoh/vital_statistics/2008

According to the NY State Department of Health, reported induced abortions for 2008 in Nassau and Suffolk totaled just under 8,300. That's nearly one baby "terminated" by abortion each hour every day all year long. Many people know

	Nassau	Suffolk	Total
2005	3,491	4,108	7,599
2006	3,671	4,832	8,503
2007	3,684	4,827	8,511
2008	3,621	4,677	8,298

someone who had an abortion and most people know that "lots" of teenagers are getting pregnant. But not many people are aware of the enormity of the abortion carnage right here on Long Island, in their communities. Please help make others aware. Use the stats in church bulletins; pass them on to prayer and youth groups; use them when writing letters to the editor. And please help defend life so we can save babies and lower the number of abortions.

Suffolk	260.1	2,949	208.8	1,057	712.7	824	158.5

This shows that about 25% of the pregnancies in Nassau & Suffolk end in abortion. The ratio accounts for pregnancies that end in miscarriage and other fetal deaths other than abortion.

Amnesty International partners with pro-abortion ACLU... Catholic Family and Human Rights Institute(C-Fam) reports on their United Nations Blog of May 6, 2010, "Amnesty International and the American Civil Liberties Union are teaming up with the "Human Rights At Home Campaign" in calling for an executive order from President Obama that "holds the U.S. accountable for its domestic human rights commitments." This would among other things require the U.S. to implement domestically and into foreign policy, "...recommendations made by human rights bodies such as...the U.N. Human Rights Council..."As C-fam states, "...many of the human rights treaty bodies have grossly reinterpreted human rights treaties to include obligations to legalize abortion..."Amnesty International has in the past been highly critical of many international pro-life laws. AI officially abandoned its neutrality concerning abortion back in 2007. This move alienated many long time religious supporters of the organization who have now withdrawn their support, such as Scottish Cardinal Keith O'Brien, Bishop Michael Evans (member of 30 years standing) and long time activist priest Daniel Berrigan, S.J.! Time for Redecision by Kevin Cirronella

Kevin won second place in the L.I. Coalition for Life Oratory Contest in March 2010.

"We need not resolve the difficult question of when life begins. When those trained in the respective disciplines of medicine, philosophy, and theology are unable to arrive at any consensus, the judiciary, at this point in the development of man's knowledge, is not in a position to speculate as to the answer." These words marked a landmark pro-abortion victory on January 22nd, 1973, in the case of Roe v. Wade. It is because of these words, written by Supreme Court Justice Blackmun, representing the majority decision, by the court's own admission that abortion in today's society ought to be outlawed for good. Through advancements in technology and science, we are able to answer these speculations posed by the court. It's because of the court's own logic that it is time to end abortion in America once and for all. The time for rededecision is now.

FEDERAL LEGISLATION

SUPREME COURT: The LICL opposes seating Elena Kagan on the Supreme Court. She could not answer a quick, reflexive "No" to the question, "Can the government order you to eat three vegetables and three fruits each day?" So does she see any limits to Federal power? Based on her history of being an abortion apologist and concerns that she would be an "activist" judge, we worry how she might rule on forced abortions, or a national "one-child" policy.

PRESIDENT OBAMA MAKE RECESS

APPOINTMENT: Dr. Donald Berwick to head the Center for Medicare & Medicaid Services. National Right to Life calls Berwick a "one-man death panel." Michael Tanner of Cato Institute quotes Dr. Berwick, "I am romantic about the [British] National Health Service. I love it." Yet, 50,000 surgeries are cancelled each year as Britons on waiting lists become too sick to proceed.

H.R.5111: The LICL supports passage of the Pitts (R-PA) & Lipinski (D-IL) Protect Life Act (HR 5111), designed to add Hyde Amendment language (limited federal funding of abortion) and conscience protection to ObamaCare. We consider this a prudent step in consideration of the fact that no federal entitlement program has ever been eliminated. BUT, the LICL has serious reservations about the ObamaCare bill's effect on all Life issues, and supports attempts to repeal, de-fund or overturn ObamaCare, even if H.R. 5111 were added to it. [FYI: Rep. King (R-NY) is now a cosponsor of HR5111].

ACTION-SAMPLE MESSAGE (to House of Reps):

Please co-sponsor the Pitts Protect Life Act, HR 5111. It applies Hyde Amendment language to the ObamaCare bill, and adds conscience protection for healthcare workers and private insurers.

DISCLOSE ACT: 6/24/10 LifeSiteNews.com reports the House passed the DISCLOSE Act (H.R.5175), condemned by family & pro-life groups, as well as the ACLU, as a threat to free speech and political participation. The Act now moves to the Senate as (S 3295). If passed, most 501(c)4, (c)5, (c)6, and 527 organizations would have to list the names of all donors of more than $600 in a publicly searchable database.

There are onerous requirements for the listing of donors and sponsors in any advertising, which would leave little time for the intended message and have a chilling effect on donors. Some powerful lobby groups (Unions, Sierra Club, NRA) have managed to get themselves exempted from these free speech limitations.

Constitutional lawyer Cleta Mitchell describes this bill as "Congress handing out 'free-speech licenses' to its buddies, and those willing to play ball." If enacted, it almost certainly could not face a Supreme Court challenge until after the Nov 2010 elections.

ACTION-SAMPLE MESSAGE (to Senate):

Do not pass the DISCLOSE Act, S 3295.

HEALTH & SCIENCE

"Sterilize the Human Race and Party into Extinction!"

South African philosopher David Benatar authored a book entitled "Better Never to Have Been: The Harm of Coming into Existence." Peter Singer, the Princeton philosopher infamous for advocating infanticide, recently discussed Benatar's position on a blog post for the New York Times entitled "Should this be the last generation?" Singer's explanation of Benatar's position included, "To bring into existence someone who will suffer is to harm that person, but to bring into existence someone who will have a good life is not to benefit him or her. Few of us would think it right to inflict severe suffering on an innocent child, even if that were the only way in which we could bring many other children into the world. Yet everyone will suffer to some extent, and if our species continues to reproduce, we can be sure that some future children will suffer severely. Hence continued reproduction will harm some children severely, and benefit none... We spend most of our lives with unfulfilled desires, and the occasional satisfactions that are all most of us can achieve are insufficient to outweigh these prolonged negative states. If we think that this is a tolerable state of affairs it is because we are, in Benatar's view, victims of the illusion of Pollyannaism. This illusion may have evolved because it helped our ancestors survive, but it is an illusion nonetheless. If we could see our lives objectively, we would see that they are not something we should inflict on anyone."

Peter Smith of LifeSiteNews.com writes, "Both Singer and Benatar both believe that human beings do not have inherent dignity. Singer, the Princeton Chair of Bioethics, has gained notoriety for asserting that infanticide is justifiable, especially for disabled infants, because they lack self-awareness, which he asserts is a requirement for personhood." Smith continues, "A key difference, however, between Singer and Benatar, an existential nihilist who chairs the Department of Philosophy at the University of Cape Town in South Africa, is that Singer believes life could be worth living in certain conditions. But Benatar flat out rejects existence as good, and the still-living author discusses that view in his controversial book... Singer invites readers to engage in a thought experiment: "So why don't we make ourselves the last generation on earth? If we would all agree to have ourselves sterilized then no sacrifices would be required - we could party our way to extinction!" Even if we take a less pessimistic view of human existence than Benatar, we could still defend this scenario because it makes us better off - for one thing, we can get rid of all the guilt about what we are doing to future generations - and it doesn't make anyone worse off, because there won't be anyone else to be worse off... Is life worth living? Are the interests of a future child a reason for bringing that child into existence? And is the continuance of our species justifiable in the face of our knowledge that it will certainly bring suffering to innocent human beings?" (LifeSiteNews.com 8 June 2010)

Bioethicist Wesley J. Smith responded to Singer on his blog at First Things. He stated that often the decision to not have children is a result of a value system promoted by the popular culture that has led to the practices of eugenic abortion and infanticide. "Reducing childbearing to crass utilitarian measurements and projections of suffering, thus, leads to justifying killing as an answer thereto, illustrating the oppression unleashed by the 'avoid suffering at all costs' attitudes so prevalent today... This is nihilism on stilts and it is polluting the West's self confidence and belief in universal human equality like the BP oil well is polluting the Caribbean. Only the resulting mess isn't measured in polluted beaches and dead birds, but existential despair that destroys human lives... We have to 'justify' continuing the species? Good grief. Under the influence of anti-human advocates like Peter Singer, we have gone in the West from seeking to 'secure the blessings of liberty for ourselves and our posterity,' to seriously questioning whether there should be any posterity at all. This is not healthy. But it is the natural consequence of rejecting human exceptionalism." (First Things, Second Hand Smoke, 7 June 2010)

Face the Truth

About 80 pro-lifers attended the Face the Truth event on Friday July 2nd to defend the unborn's right to life. Travelers who exited the LIE in Manorville, heading east to vacation and celebrate Independence Day, were greeted by the pro-lifers with graphic and non-graphic signs. The pro-lifers included families and young children. If we don't remind the public that life begins in the womb and that abortion is a deadly wrong, who will do it? Thanks to all those who attended this event, co-sponsored by the LI Coalition for Life and Peconic Right to Life Association.

Time for Redecision by Kevin Cirronella

As rational and moral agents, members of society are bound to certain normative standards of ethics. Even if people such as post-modernists and atheists reject the proposition of absolute morality it is impossible to reject some normative foundational standards of ethics. It is this standard of normative ethics which claim that it is wrong to kill an innocent, rape, or torture. This is the underlying factor in the existence of a justice system in the first place.

Abortion at its very essence is an attack on these normative standards, since it is the stripping of life. Murder in any form is wrong because it is a direct attack against intrinsic human worth. All people would agree that murder is wrong both legally and morally. In this case the distinction should be made between killing and murder. Society does condone killing if necessary, for instance in self-defense, but murder is much more egregious, since it's the intentional killing of an innocent. When abortion is analyzed it is not just a form of killing, its plain murder.

In terms of abortion, society is putting a stamp of approval on the most egregious violation of these standards. This is true because the most innocent and blameless level of humanity is at the level of a fetus and an infant. Society would be most appalled at a situation in which a mother intentionally drowned her new-born infant. But if looked at closely is there a difference between an infant and an unborn child? Both are dependant on their mother for survival, in terms both are non-viable without the presence of the mother. Both are limited in logical and moral rationality. Both are unable to introspect on their own being.

It is interesting to note, however, that these premises are justifications for abortion. But, the majority of pro-choice advocates would never justify infanticide as well. Why? Because, even pro-choice supporters retain some degree of moral decency. It is very hard to tell your neighbor that you support murdering year-old infants. When you analyze the situation closely, you recognize the fact that there is really no difference between an unborn and an infant. It is clear that you are killing a defenseless and innocent human being.

In the U.S. and around the world, governments hold fast to the proposition that women should hold the right to an abortion. In the U.S., this right gained protection under the Supreme Court case of Roe v. Wade, maintaining the position that women have the right to privacy, and by extension the right to an abortion. Proponents of the Roe v. Wade decision continuously argue the point of viability, meaning the child can't survive on it's own thus can't be considered a separate living entity. Johnson, Editor of Free Inquiry answers this: "The basic flaw in this argument is that it makes the moral standing of the embryo or fetus hinge on a factor external to it. Viability is not an intrinsic characteristic of the fetus but a relational characteristic: it depends on the relation between the fetus's stage of development and the state of neonatal medical technology. The moral standing of a being properly depends, however, only on the characteristics intrinsic to it. A twenty-eight-week-old fetus had no hope of surviving outside its mother's womb in 1900, but by 2000, technological advances had given it quite favorable prospects in such a circumstance. Yet it cannot plausibly be thought that the moral standing of a twenty-eight-week-old fetus was different in 1900 and 2000."

Since we have established at least a baseline idea that there is no moral distinction between an unborn child and an infant, using pro-choice rationale itself, where does that leave us legally?

By the Roe v. Wade majority decision based on the premise that fetuses are non-viable without the mother then either this decision implicitly justifies infanticide, killing a paralyzed person, and killing an unconscious person or it implicitly overturns itself. The majority decision as stated by Justice Blackmun never answers the question of when life begins. It argues that it maintains the opening that if the unborn are proven as living beings then they would gain protection under the 14th amendment, thus gaining the right to life. This is in Section 9 of the majority decision.

At this time in history, all the existing evidence points to the fact that a fetus is a living being. The most basic fact is that an embryo, fetus, child or at any stage during a persons life, the person is a person based on a genetic code. Embryos and fetuses have that code, ergo making it distinctly human; it isn't a goat or a fish, it's a human. A Senate Report submitted in response to the "Human Life Bill," states "Physicians, biologists, and other scientists agree that conception marks the beginning of the life of a human being - a being that is alive and a member of the human species. There is overwhelming agreement on this point in countless medical, biological, and scientific writings. Everything that determines the individuality and originality of a person is established at conception. The first single cell contains the entire genetic blueprint in all its complexity."

The majority of pro-choice advocates accept this fact because it can't be disputed: it is biologically a human, and due to technology can survive on it's own. Instead they have embraced the "it lacks rationality, thus it isn't a human" argument, which is fallacious at best. The Supreme Court decision is now in a logical double-bind: it can't rely on science to be in its favor, because biology has proven the humanity of the unborn, and it can't rely on the rationality argument because doing so justifies clearly morally egregious and indefensible illegal actions.

As American citizens and members of a moral society, we should not allow the government to disregard its own words, especially when dealing with matters of life and death. The Supreme Court has the duty to insure that all Americans gain the protection of the most valued document in the U.S., the constitution. As such, we must demand that the court fulfills this duty and once and for all strike down the evil that pervades our society, namely the evil of abortion.
